Undergraduate Advising

I regularly serve as a primary academic adviser for 5-10 Lang College Philosophy students, and I sometimes advise the senior work projects of Lang College philosophy students. I have not kept strict record of my students' projects. Among those I have advised are the following four: Jacob Gillinger, "On the Aesthetics of Avant-garde Music" (2007-2008), Joshua Weinberg, "Nietzsche's Ethics" (2008-2009), Nicole Dular, "Bernard Williams, Ethics and the Question of Suicide" (2009), and Hannah Read, "A Defense of the Intellectual Poets" (2013).

I have helped to place many BA and MA philosophy students in PhD programs in philosophy. This group includes Alexei Angelides (Stanford University), Carlos Romero (Rutgers University), Sarah Bosworth (University of Chicago), Oli Stefano (Stony Brook), Kenneth Luu (Humboldt University, Berlin (Classics)), Nicole Dular (Brandeis), Rebecca Harrison (UC Riverside) and Hannah Read (Tufts – MA Program with full funding; now finished and doing PhD in Philosophy at Duke University), Owen Alldritt (Emory), Christopher Merwin (Emory), Zac Turnbull (University of New Mexico), Ally Peabody (UCLA), Zacchary Lloyd (CUNY/GC, Literature), Johnny Brennan (Fordham), Eric McPhail (Vanderbilt), Robert Weitzer (Stony Brook, English), James Wheeler (Stony Brook), Dylan Shaul (Vanderbilt University), Wayne Wapeemukwa (Penn State), Jeremiah Tillman (University of Maryland), Bisher Khatib (University of Ottawa).

Other Graduate Advising Activities

Coordinator of a PhD Works-in-Progress Series, Fall 2012-present – This involves 2-3 events annually for a group that includes PhD students in my research group, recently promoted students who are intending to work with me, or who have related interests, interested MA students, visiting scholars and, occasionally, interested undergraduates. The events are casual and festive, with food and drink, and each participant must make a presentation, discussing their current work and professional activities. We use the collective setting to refine work-strategies, identify professional resources and network. This activity is especially important for PhD students working with me, since many are at least to some extent concerned with topics in Anglo-American analytic Philosophy.

Founder/Faculty Adviser of the Wittgenstein Workshop, Spring 2009-present – This is a group that hosts 3-4 events each semester. Despite the name, the range of topics is great. The common theme is a broad-minded approach to analytic philosophy, typically by scholars who also have serious research interests in other philosophical traditions. I originally founded the Workshop to provide a setting, within the New School's Philosophy Department, for PhD students to more effectively integrate analytic methods and topics into their research. Since the Spring of 2011, the series has been run by my graduate students, and I serve as the Workshop's faculty advisor. Students have applied for and consistently received small grants to support the series from the NSSR Dean's Office and the New School's University Student Senate. Speakers to date come from many countries outside the US. Workshop texts and audio recordings of some events are posted on the NSSR Philosophy Department Blog.

I serve regularly as a secondary adviser for MA Theses, usually 2-3 per year. These roles involve reading and commenting on drafts, and participating in a defense. In addition, it is standard practice for students – including all of those named here – to ask second readers for letters of reference for PhD (or other relevant academic or professional) placement.

I also regularly host Fulbright, DAAD, Humboldt and other visiting scholars in the NSSR Philosophy Department.

Major roles

Chair, Philosophy Department, Summer 2014-Summer 2017. This is a position that involves management of and leadership for a department with 11 full time members, 1 term-lecturer, 5 long-term adjuncts, 3 visitors and approximately 175 graduate students (with roughly 90 at the MA and 85 at the PhD level) and 25 undergraduate majors. Major tasks involve managing departmental tenure cases, overseeing the curriculum and student advising, managing the departmental budget, overseeing the annual schedule, running meetings, coordinating with the administration and supervising hiring.

Founding Co-Director of a graduate certificate program in Gender and Sexuality Studies, Summer 2014-Summer 2017. This is a position I took on after serving as the Chair of a university-wide working group to revive graduate level Gender Studies at the New School, from Fall 2012-Spring 2014. Among other things, this group was awarded a Provost's Office "Mutual Mentoring Grant" for 2013-2014 to begin to develop its projects and profile. Together with my co-director – Margot Bouman, ADHT, Parsons – I advise all students involved in the program. We run an internal colloquium and an external speakers series, organize bi-annual works-in-progress sessions and organize interviews with and our research students, which are posted on our blog (<http://blogs.newschool.edu/genderandsexualitystudies/>). As of the end of spring term 2017, 43 graduate students from across the New School were enrolled in GSS, just over half of them from NSSR.

Member of the University Committee for Promotions and Reviews (UPRC), Fall 2011-Spring 2013 and Fall 2014-Summer 2017. The UPRC undertakes a procedural review of all tenure cases that come through the university. Because it involves both careful reading of many tenure files and reports on select individual cases, membership on the committee represents a substantial service role.

Smaller roles

Current

Leader of Philosophy Department Diversity Initiative, a fundraising endeavor to support students and early career scholars from historically underrepresented racial and ethnic groups, Spring 2020-present.

Member of the Joint NSSR/Lang Reappointment Committee, Fall 2019-present.

Co-organizer on behalf of the New School of the Berlin Critical Theory Summer School, at the Institute for Philosophy at Humboldt University, 2017-present—

Summer 2017, Topic: “Social Progress and Regression” (speakers included Amy Allen, Jay Bernstein, Hauke Brunkhorst, Alice Crary, Axel Honneth, Rahel Jaeggi, Terry Pinkard, Martin Saar)

Summer 2018, Topic: “Ideology” (speakers included Robin Celikates, Alice Crary, Robert Gooding-Williams, Sally Haslanger, Axel Honneth, Rahel Jaeggi and Karen Ng).

Summer 2019, Topic: “Social Unreason”.

Summer 2020, POSTPONED UNTIL 2021.

Co-convener of The Prize for Distinguished Achievement in Social Philosophy. This is a collective endeavor by faculty and graduate students from the New School for Social Research and Vanderbilt University. Conceived to recognize groundbreaking philosophical work tackling questions of social epistemology, social ontology, theories of race, gender, class, ability, animality, and the natural environment, the first biennial Prize will be granted in the spring of 2021—to Robert Gooding-Williams—and the occasion will be celebrated with a public lecture with responses from philosophers and social theorists. See also www.SocialPhilosophyPrize.org.

Past roles

Member, American Philosophical Association, Eastern Division, Program Committee, 2018-2020. In this connection, I organized an author-meets-critics panel on Veena Das’ Textures of the Ordinary (with Penelope Deutscher and Sandra Laugier responding) and a symposium on “The Future of Feminism in Philosophy” (with papers by Elizabeth Barnes, Nancy Bauer and Teresa Blankmeyer-Burke), both to take place at the 2020 Eastern APA.

Co-organizer, with Matt Congdon, of a workshop on “Social Visibility as a Route to Social Justice,” funded by Vanderbilt University, with speakers Nancy Bauer, Matt Congdon, Alice Crary, Sally Haslanger, Charles Mills, Shatema Threadcraft, Robert Gooding-Williams and Linda Zerilli, April 2019. For details see <https://socialvisibility.home.blog/>.

Instructor on behalf of the New School for Social Research, Transregional Center for Democracy Studies, Wroclaw, Poland, 2015 and 2019, offering the courses “Seeing in the Margins: Questions of Moral Visibility” and “Radical Animal”

Co-organizer, with Rahel Jaeggi, of a Workshop on the “Dialectics of Progress: Critical Theory and Social Change,” at the New School for Social Research, with Humboldt University, the Heuss Foundation and the Deutsche Forschungsgemeinschaft, October 2017.

Organizer, Arendt/Schurmann Symposium, “Feminist Investigations: A Manifesto,” a 2-day event at the NSSR in May 2014, with lectures by Nancy Bauer, Sarah Beckwith, Sandra Laugier, Toril Moi and Linda Zerilli.

Organizer, together with Timothy Pachirat (NSSR Politics), of university-wide faculty reading/working group on “Animal Studies,” Spring 2013-Spring 2014.

Organizer, Arendt/Schurmann Symposium, “The Philosophy of Stanley Cavell,” a 2-day event at the NSSR in October 2002, with lectures by Stanley Cavell, James Conant, Cora Diamond, Stephen Mulhall and Hilary Putnam.

Research Groups – I have participated in various international research groups with varying levels of activity and time commitment. The most active of these include:

Feminist Investigations (organized together with Nancy Bauer, Sarah Beckwith, Sandra Laugier, Toril Moi, Linda Zerilli). This group held workshops at Duke (Winter '11), Chicago (Spring '12 and Fall '12); its members were awarded a grant for an “Exploratory Seminar” by the Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Studies at Harvard (Spring '13); and the group held conferences scheduled in Paris (Fall '13) and at the New School for Social Research (Spring '14). Our concluding event for this sequence was a special issue of New Literary Studies, which was published in 2015.

The Philosophical Import of Ordinary Language: Austin, Ryle, Wittgenstein, and their Contemporary Significance (organized by Martin Gustafsson; I participated in a couple of events Sweden in relation to this project).

Forms of Life (organized by Estelle Ferrarese, Rahel Jaeggi and Sandra Laugier, with support from a grant from the European Research Council – I am listed as an “advisor” to the group and have participated in events in Berlin and Paris).
